DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

A. Claims 33-35 are objected to because of the following informalities: Claim 33 recites "the language code...." Perhaps, Applicant meant - - a language code - -. Claim 34 recites "the country code...." Perhaps, Applicant meant - - a country code - -. Claim 35 recites "the country's area code...." Perhaps, Applicant meant - - a country's code - -. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-19,32-35 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being clearly anticipated by Burrell, IV.(5,993,089)

With respect to Claims 1,3-4, Burrell teaches the eight bit code activation on the front page diagram with a first four bit code combined with a second four bit code. With respect to Claims 2,19, Burrell teaches the numeric values for the bits in figure 1B. With respect to Claim 5, Burrell teaches the activation of all eight sensors in figure 2M-6("Insert"). With respect to Claim 6, Burrell teaches the activating of at least one character to produce data in figure 2J-2. With respect to Claims 7-10, Burrell teaches the function, data character string activation and the two-sensor activation to produce data character strings in figures 2J-2 to figure 2M-6. With respect to Claim 11, Burrell teaches the activation of one set of sensors and the non-activation of another set of sensors to produce a vowel ("a") in figure 2A. With respect to Claim 12, Burrell teaches the activation of at least one sensor of the first and second sensor set to produce a vowel in figure 2K. With respect to Claim 13, Burrell teaches the activation of at least one sensor of the first and second sensor set to produce a consonant ("c") in figure 2C. With respect to Claim 14, Burrell teaches the space activation as recited in figure 2J-1. With respect to Claim 15, Burrell teaches the punctuation mark activation in figure 2D. With respect to Claim 16, Burrell teaches the symbol activation in ("{" in figure 2H. With respect to Claim 17, Burrell teaches the number activation in figure 2E. With respect to Claim 18, Burrell teaches the function activation in figure 2G. With respect to Claim 32, Burrell teaches the shifting (switching) into a second mode in the Abstract. Lines 15-20. With respect to Claims 33-35, Burrell teaches the language or country code or area code activation in the Abstract, lines 20-21.

Art Unit: 2854

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 20-31 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Burrell.

With respect to Claims 20-31, the difference between Burrell and Claims 20-31 is that Burrell does not teach the activation of a single sensor to move the object in figure 2I. However, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to use a single key to move an object so as to reduce user fatigue and /or key memorization. Burrell teaches the movement and rotation of objects in his figure 2I. The particular finger used to activate the sensor is an obvious choice of the specific user. A user is not required to use his or her thumb to activate a particular sensor. Surely, an operator may use his or her pinky to achieve the same method as recited in these claims.

Response to Arguments

5. Applicant's arguments filed 5-30-2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant appears to be arguing the instant specification. The claims of the instant invention do not recite any of the language that Applicant argues in the response dated 5-30-2003. Applicant is reminded that it is the claims of the instant invention that the Examiner compares to the prior art of record. "The invention disclosed in [Applicant's] written description may be outstanding in its field, but the name of the game is the claim." In re Hiniker Co., 47 USPQ2d 1523,1529 (Fed. Cir. 1998). (Emphasis added).

Conclusion

6. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within

Art Unit: 2854

TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
